Care Residents Saddle Up for Collaborative Rodeo Fun Day

A Dunblane care service brought the Wild West to Scotland as it hosted its annual summer party.

Located on Leewood Road, Dunblane, Ranaich House is a specialist residential service for adults with learning disabilities and mental or physical health needs, part of Cygnet's Social Care division.

The much-anticipated Ranaich's Rodeo saw staff, residents and their families come together for their annual collaborative summer party.

Individuals supported at Ranaich House donned their cowboy-themed costumes in the garden, which was decorated as a Western saloon.

"Our party was a huge success and filled with plenty of fun, laughter and Wild West spirit. There was a lot going on so everyone had a chance to get involved and enjoy themselves," explained Molly Sinclair, Activity Coordinator.

Ranaich's Rodeo included a variety of Western-themed games, such as a shootout and cactus hoopla, which brought plenty of friendly competition. A tombola and a raffle added to the fun spirit, with prizes donated by friends, families and local businesses.

Adding to the theme, the Cygnet Social Care service put on a Wild West-inspired menu for partygoers to enjoy.

Molly continued: "Everyone had an amazing time and the atmosphere was brilliant. It was wonderful to see our residents, staff and families all coming together, joining in with the activities and making the most of the day."
