Cygnet St William's Hosts Fourth Annual 'GlastHOMEBury' Festival

A care service recently brought the festival spirit to Darlington with a jam-packed day of fun and music, as creativity took centre stage.

Cygnet St William's, a 12-bed neuropsychiatric service for men with acquired brain injuries, recently hosted its fourth GlastHOMEBury festival.

Bringing the iconic Glastonbury magic to life, the event saw service users enjoy a day in the garden listening to a variety of Glastonbury sets as well as an exclusive live set from local singer Jack Ramsey.

Georgia Nelson, Regional Lead Occupational Therapist at the Cygnet Health Care service, reflected on the success of the event.

She said: "Jack's set had all of our service users singing along to some classic GlastHOMEBury tunes and the whole place was buzzing.

"It was a resounding success that once again brought service users and staff together in celebration. The event was a true team effort, co-produced with service users to make sure everything was the best."

The electric atmosphere wasn't dampened by the rain, which only added to the iconic Glastonbury experience. The garden was decorated by service users in a Tiki hut style, turning the area into a vibrant celebration space.

Festival-inspired activities were also available, including a corn-hole throwing game, a mindfulness area and a temporary tattoo station. All festivalgoers donned a VIP wristband before tucking into a festival-worthy dinner of hot dogs.

"For four years running now, the individuals we support and the staff have come together for a proper festival day, and this one might just have been the best yet," explained Georgia.

"Even with the rain, the fourth GlastHOMEBury stood as another heartfelt celebration of community, creativity, and connection at Cygnet St William's."
