Nottingham Mental Health Hospital Bakes a Difference for Charity

Staff and patients at a mental health hospital in Clifton served up support with a sweet fundraiser for a cancer charity.

Cygnet Hospital Clifton, which offers support for men with personality disorders and mental health needs, raised £375 for Macmillan by hosting a bake sale.

The charity provides emotional, financial, practical and physical support to people living with cancer. Macmillan also offers vital cancer services as well as researches and campaigns to achieve better cancer care.

Stacey Antoine-Fontenelle, Administration Manager, Training Coordinator and PCREF Lead at the Cygnet Health Care service, said: "Cancer affects so many lives and Macmillan's dedication to providing care, compassion and support reflects our values at Cygnet. This was a cause close to our hearts.

"There was a lovely atmosphere throughout the fundraiser, with colleagues and service users getting involved and showing once again the generosity and community that makes Cygnet Hospital Clifton so special."

Service users played a vital role in the fundraising as they baked and decorated delicious cakes to sell. Staff also got involved in the fundraising initiative, bringing in a variety of treats such as cupcakes, savoury snacks and even sandwiches.

The Cygnet Health Care service then enjoyed an afternoon of tucking into the food, sipping coffee and taking time to chat with each other.

Stacey added: "There was great food, great company and a great cause. Every contribution helped make the event a success and supported the important work carried out by Macmillan."
